Factors for a successful office environment

Changed work patterns and new ways of working in a hybrid world place new demands on the workplace. At Kinnarps, we are looking at how and what we can contribute to making the office an attractive, sustainable and value-creating place where employees feel good, thrive and perform optimally. We have identified a number of factors that contribute to a successful office environment. However, you won't find a one-size -fits-all solution with us. We offer analyses that help each organisation to design its own environment based on its specific needs. This will not only be a benefit for the individual, but also important for companies and society as a whole.

Circles of Change – Kinnarps concept on sustainable circularity

As one of the biggest players in the industry at Orgatec 2022, the company will have a stand in Hall 9 and as well show a special equipped truck for remaking and refurbishing furniture. The truck is a part of Kinnarps concept on sustainable circularity – Circles of Change – which offers a number of different circular services to prolong the life of furniture.
