You can't do without it: Food News with all the top news

OBERHACHING, October 2023

Food News is the name of the bimonthly market report sent out by Paul M. Müller from Oberhaching. Always included: insider knowledge from the industry, current developments and an interview with external experts and exciting insights.

It is well known that managing director Thomas Schneidawind, as a food wholesaler with his company, focuses on the highest quality in food. He also attaches great importance to this in the Food News: „It is very important to us to do precise research, to reveal trends in the industry and to stay in contact with customers, suppliers and partners.

In concrete terms, this means that six times a year Paul M. Müller presents all the information on current economic and political developments, news from the industry and the challenges and success stories of various producers.

Thus, local extreme weather events in early summer as well as the planned toll increase in Germany as early as July 2023 found their place in the Food News. Always with a focus on what this means for harvest prospects, quality and price development.

Thomas Schneidawind is sure: „It's always worth reading“.
